DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 8-14 are pending in the application.
2. The indicated allowability of claims 8-14 is withdrawn in view of the newly discovered reference(s) to Hunlich (6,584,107 B1). Rejections based on the newly cited reference(s) follow.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

4. Claim 8, 12-14 are rejected under 35 USC 102(e) as being anticipated by Hunlich (US 6,584,107 B1).

Claim 8, Hunlich discloses a method for determining a network access address for transmitting messages from a switching system to a communication terminal, which is connected to the switching system to a communication terminal, which is connected to the switching system via a communication network, the method comprising the steps of: storing in the communication terminal both a terminal address individually allocated in the communication network and a system address designating the switching system associated with the communication terminal (in figure 1 the bit sequence representing the hexadecimal value 8001h represents the ring network group address GA1, which, besides the ring network individual address EA2,4, is additionally allocated to the second and fourth ATM communication terminal device KE2, 4, col. 4, lines 15-60); implementing subscriber interfaces (RING TABLE RT1-RT3 are subscriber interfaces) for connecting the communication terminal (KE1-KE4) to communication network (VE1-VE3) via hubs (interface RING TABLE RT1-RT3) connected to the communication network; transmitting, when the communication terminal is connected to a subscriber interface, a configuration message containing the terminal address from a relevant hub to the switching system determined by reference to the system address stored in the communication terminal (figure 1 shows a packet containing virtual channel identification RVCI of the ATM cells that are transmitted within the virtual ring network path inventively represent a ring network individual address EA, or respectively, a ring network group address GA, col. 5, lines 15-20); and determining the network access address via the configuration message (see figure 1, 2).

Claims 12-14, Hunlich further teach wherein the network address is an ATM-based virtual path identifier/virtual channel identifier VPI/VCI address (see abstract).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 9-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hunlich (US 6,584,107 B1).

Claims 9-10, as explained in the rejection statement of claim 8 (parent claim), Hunlich discloses all the claim limitations in parent claim.

Although Hunlich does not teach transmitting at least one of an identification number and a password to the switching system from the communication terminal for registering the communication terminal at the switching system, this claim limitation is well known in the art. It is well known that packet switching system stores and registers only address of data processor which requested registration for packet transmission, when user input identification information and password corresponds to prestored information.

Therefore, it would have been obvious at the time of the invention was made to implement the registration step in Hunlich.

Allowable Subject Matter

7. Claim 11 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Art Unit: 2664

8. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter: the prior art made of record does not teach or fairly suggest in combination a method for determining a network access address for transmitting messages from a switching system to a communication terminal as claimed in claim 8, wherein, if the allocation of the communication terminal is changed from a first subscriber interface to a second subscriber interface, the network access address stored in the switching system and allocated to the corresponding communication terminal is updated by the configuration message transmitted on connection to the second subscriber interface.
